

My teacher is taking our class on an excursion to Tocal Homestead.

This is Tocal Homestead.

Tocal is a very old farm.

There are lots of old buildings and fences to see.

We will meet some Tour Guides dressed up in costumes. They are very friendly.

When we arrive they will tell us about interesting things around the farm.

They will show us where we have our recess and lunch and where the toilets are.
They will explain the rules to us.

There are sheep, chickens, horses and pigs at Tocal. It's fun watching them. But they don't like us to follow them. If we follow them they feel they are being chased and they get frightened.

Our guides will tell us about all things we will see and do during our day at Tocal.

Someone will ring the old bell when it is time to move to the next activity.

The activities we do show us how chores were done 150 years ago.

We will use water in some activities.

It will feel cool on my skin on a hot day.

In the old kitchen the light is a little bit dim and my eyes might take a minute to adjust. The guide will explain how they did the chores before electricity came to the farm.

I will be able to dress up in costume.

My friends and I will look just like children in the 1850s!

Inside the house the ceilings are very high.

When I am in the house I will need to walk around carefully without touching things. It's nice to look at all the things.

Some things in the house are very unusual. I will be able to find out about them. I can only touch things if the guide says its ok.

When we walk around the farm we will see different things and smell different smells.

I will see huge big trees with huge big roots.

And some very special pigs

I might even see some sheep poo!

It's going to be fun. I'm going to love our excursion to Tocal Homestead!
